ABOUT

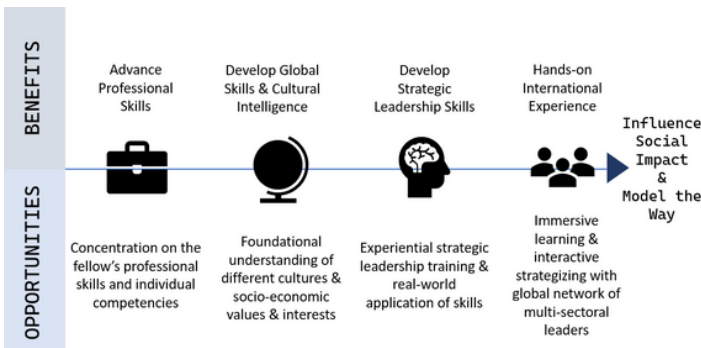

The IMID's Global Leaders Fellowship Program (GLFP) is an immersive global leadership development program aimed to influence social impact at the foundational and systems-level. Our program will provide a transformational experience for our GLFP fellows to experience the world through IMID opportunities, gain new global skills, and apply skills and knowledge domestically and internationally.

SKILLS & TRAINING

Preparing today's students, as aspiring Global Leaders Fellows, to navigate the challenges of tomorrow and lead with authenticity through a special skillset as they grow and develop into effective global leaders.

Today's changing world requires a special skillset for aspiring leaders to flourish as they embark on a journey to grow and develop into effective global leaders. The continuous evolving state of the world, impacted by globalization, informs the need for globally competent leaders. Leaders of today and tomorrow must have competency in cross-cultural awareness and practice:

- Commitment to learning about other countries' business, political, academic, and cultural environments worldwide;
- Learn the perspectives and behaviors of other countries – culture, trends and technologies;
- Ability and genuine willingness to collaborate with other cultures;
- Adaptability to the living and social standards in other cultures; and
- Embrace diversity with cultural equality by suspending cultural biases.

TIMELINE

The program offers a 1-year immersive experience in which recruitment of upper division students at a higher education institution typically starts at the beginning of the fall semester or arranged between the academic institution and IMID.
